A Psychological Approach to Couple Therapy®

Beckoning

- Evaluate ability to use attraction through physical gesturing
- Emphasize the importance of using attraction over fear, threat, or guilt
- Discover what gestures work and don't work to attract each other
- Notice any frustration or hostility in partners who are not adept at using attraction

Corralling Questions & Comments

- A strategy to get information while asserting secure-functioning principles
- Forces a response that may expose insecure functioning
- Scan closely for somatic reactions
- Insecures take corralling questions literally; secures grasp the spirit

Corralling Questions – Purpose

- Gently rope couple in with a question or comment that drives them toward secure-functioning
- Uncover problems with interdependency
- Expose hidden agendas or secrets
- Test your hypothesis if you suspect one or both partners are providing false information

Conclusion

- PACT focuses on bottom-up interventions that bypass higher cortical areas
- PACT is the "show me" psychotherapy
  - we look for proof
- The PACT therapist takes a stand for secure functioning relationship
- Secure functioning is available to all couples, despite each partner's internal working model
- Secure functioning will only occur if the couple therapist expects it
- Secure functioning is not just good for couples but for the world
